DAN Automated External Defibrillators (AED) for Scuba Divers

DAN Automated External Defibrillators (AED) for Scuba Divers - 3 hours

This course is aimed at providing divers the additional tool of an Automated External Defibrillator in the event of a diving related accident in which the injured diver's heart is not beating. Statistics show that more than 25% of diving related fatalities involved cardiac problems. The student will learn practice appropriate basic life support procedures for a non-breathing diver with no pulse and will develop proficiency in using an AED during resuscitation.

Most of the knowledge development for the course is done at home in your spare time using the DAN student manual. During the course we will review that material and answer any questions that you have in a brief discussion session and then spend the rest of the time in actual hands-on scenarios in which you will provide first aid to your "injured" class members.

Prerequisites

- Have a current first aid and CPR completion card. The course is open to divers and non-divers alike.
